Excerpt: .for the defense of her neighbors, 3000 for the Canadian expedition, and 2000 for the rest of the war, making a total of 12,000. Trumbull, History of Connecticut, I., 351. Trumbull, History of Connecticut, I., 428. 4 The taxes, usually one, two, three, and at the greatest in times of peace four pence on the pound, had risen to seven or eight pence-- a ruinous rate for a poor and struggling agricultural commonwealth, whose own governmental expenses were kept down to the lowest point (Johnston, History of Connecticut, 254). The expenses of the government at this period were inconsiderable; they scarcely amounted to the salary of a King s Governor. The exthe colony nor its financial astuteness had grown apace. The old system would not produce the required revenue, and the colonists knew of no other sound method, so they followed the treacherous course...
